The GDLA Education Committee and Platinum Sponsor Exponent present a CLE that will explore the rapidly advancing field of nanotechnology, featuring Eric Guyer, PhD, PE, Principal Engineer and Exponent's Atlanta Office Director.

Exponent
Engineering and Scientific Consulting

What was once science fiction now completely surrounds the average American – whether you know it or not. Industries currently utilizing nanotechnology include: automotive, sporting goods, consumer electronics, pharmaceuticals, medical devices, textiles and protective coatings, to name a few.

The rate of integrating such technologies into average, everyday products and devices has far outpaced the associated analytical test methods that exist and are commonly used to evaluate other low-tech products. This has significant implications for experts evaluating products, which in turn, has implications for attorneys representing product manufacturers.

This seminar will introduce attorneys to this exciting field, while addressing the aforementioned issues. It is designed for all experience levels.

GDLA Members: $25

GDLA Non-Members: $75

Includes 1 CLE credit and a three-course lunch at the Atlanta Fish Market

The restaurant is located at 265 Pharr Road, N.E., Atlanta, GA 30305 | $2 valet parking only*
